

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to methods for modulating the side effects, including immunogenicity, of a protein therapeutic via derivatization with a protein protecting group using reversible or labile linkages.